Tips for Better Networking

Many people feel a certain way about networking and it is not always positive. Many strangers in a room exchanging information about each other can scare even the biggest extroverts. However, networking done right, has its advantages and in this edition of the EWC newsletter we will cover some tips for networking success.

- 1. Focus on Learning– According to Harvard Business Review, focusing on learning and having an open mind to the opportunities that might unfold is a great way to approach networking.
- 2. Identify Common Interests– Another way to make networking easier is to think about how your interests and goals align with those of the people you will meet. When networking is backed up by shared interests, it will feel more authentic and more likely to lead to meaningful relationships.
- 3. Think Broadly About What You Can Give– Sharing your interests may not always seem beneficial at work. If you view networking as a way to give others beneficial information, it will become more enjoyable. Remember, you can always bring something valuable to the table.
- 4. Find a Higher Purpose– Any work activity becomes easier to do when there is a “why” behind your actions. Therefore, try to link your effort to a goal or vision.
